ENGINEERS PLAY

CONSPICUOUS PART

MADE IT POSSIBLE FOR YANKEES TO ADVANCE.

By Erection of Pontons and
Bridges Over Meuse—Drive
Enemy Back.

With the American Army North of Verdun, Nov. 5.—(I. N. S.)— American engineers, who have played such a conspicuous part in the war, made it possible for the Americans to advance east of the Meuse river today by throwing four pontons across the river during the night.

At dawn, the German observers spotted the bridges and the boche artillery began shelling them.

One was destroyed, but the dough-boys swarmed across the others with the shells dropping all about them.

As the Americans reached the other side they deployed in skirmish formation, and quickly drove back the enemy. The Germans were severely trounced.

The Americans on the Meuse river have advanced over fifteen miles since the beginning of their offensive last Friday morning.

Throughout today, the Yankees went ahead with increased enthusiasm, everywhere overcoming enemy resistance.
(The advance on Tuesday reached four miles.)

The Yankees drove the retreating Germans through the Meuse valley like sheep. German divisions were subsequently thrown into the struggle in a futile effort to hold up the Americans.

Our guns now dominate important German strongholds and vital German lines of communication.

NAPOLEON'S HEIRS SHAKING

HANDS IN FREEDOM'S CAUSE

Great Monarch's Descendants Shake Hands—Dramatic Meeting of the American and French "Princes."

Thos. H. Benton and Prince Michel Murat (right), Napoleon's descendants, shaking hands for liberty.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Bonaparte
boys are fighting for freedom today.
Autocracy has been defeated.

One hundred years after the last great world war ended in toppling Napoleon's seven thrones, two of his heirs met the other day, in the present world war, to fight for the first time, and as democrats.

One is enroute to Russia as a member of "The Right" King Joseph Janin.
The other was enroute to Liberty
Loan headquarters to buy loan bonds.

Call me "Captain," said Prince Michel Murat, great-grand-nephew of Napoleon and great grandson of the King of Naples, as he shook hands with Thomas H. Benton, Oakland halter, great grandnephew of Napoleon and great grandson of Joseph Bonaparte, king of Naples and later king of Spain, who fled to the United States.

"Tom's good enough for me," said Benton, "I guess we're through with this principle of a group picture."

First Meeting of Bonaparte Heirs
"Just democrats," responded Prince Murat, as he firmly grasped Benton's hand.

It was the first time the head of the Bonapartist family in America and one of the heads of the European Bonapartes had met. A smile crossed each man's face.

"I guess we belong to the same generation," said the European prince to the American prince.

"And I guess we stand for the same thing—democracy."

A little more than a century ago there were Bonapartes on the thrones of France, Spain, Italy, Naples, Sicily, Holland and Westphalia. They represented anything but democracy.

But today that's left of the Little Corporal's family represents all the Little Corporals of the world.
